Wartburg Trumpet

Wartburg College, Waverly, Iowa Volume 72 Number 18 February 17, 1978

Will appear Feb. 27

The Waverly Consort, a group of nine singers and instrumentalists from Waverly Place in New York City, will perform as part of Wartburg's Artist Series. Tickets for the concert, which is to be held Monday, Feb. 27, in Neumann Auditorium are still available. See story on page 2.

Tuition costs among Regents' agenda items

A rise in tuition costs for students will be among the items considered by Wartburg's Board of Regents, meeting on campus today and tomorrow.

The board is scheduled to examine the college's budget and approve a tuition hike for the 1978-79 school year, according to Ted Heine, assistant to the president.

Heine said the expected cost increase was inevitable due to rising costs of operation the college is facing.

Also on the regents' agenda will be a review of construction on campus and the Design for Tomorrow fund raising campaign.

The regents visited with students during dinner in the cafeteria in September, but Heine said the board had no similar plans for their February meeting.

Two student representatives, Senate President Cindy Kasper and junior Kirk Kelloway, will attend the meetings and are available for student input.

The board meets twice annually to review college operations and set forth new policies.

A student initiated proposal to serve wine in the Castle Room is not scheduled to be discussed by the regents, according to Dr. Kent Hawley, vice president for student affairs.

Dr. Hawley explained that the proposal is still under consideration by the Student-Faculty Exchange Committee, and upon passage there would have to be approved by President William Jellema before being presented to the regents.

Admissions figures show possible enrollment jump

Applications from prospective students are up 59 percent from this time last year, according to Dan Gapinski, admissions counselor.

As of Feb. 11, the Admissions Office had received 375 applications, up from 236 in 1977. This figure also shows an increase over applications in 1976, when 335 applications were in at this time.

"This looks like a good year all the way through," Gapinski said, adding that the Admissions Office hopes the increase will carry through September.

Gapinski pointed out that the number of students who have sent in deposits is also higher. Deposits have been received from 78 prospective students as compared with 56 in 1977, a 39 percent increase.

These increases are particularly surprising in light of a new financial aid arrangement which incorporates federal and state grants, Gapinski said.

This addition slows the processing of financial aid information for prospective students and in turn holds up applications.

"The response might be higher, but some applicants will hesitate until they receive financial aid information," Gapinski noted.

Gapinski attributed the increase to several factors including an earlier start in recruiting, a larger admissions staff and particularly visitation days.

"You get a student here on campus and he finds out that what you've been telling him about Wartburg is true. This makes a huge amount of difference," Gapinski said.

Spring visitation days are scheduled for Monday, Feb. 20, Saturday, March 4, and Thursday, April 6.

Gapinski was also enthusiastic about the quality of prospective students, stating, "We have the numbers and we have the quality too. This may be one of the best academic classes Wartburg has seen in many years. We are pulling the cream."

"If things keep going this way, it will be the best enrollment year Wartburg has ever had."

Scholars to vie for awards

One hundred sixteen high school seniors will be at Wartburg tomorrow for Regents Day, competing for $40,500 in scholarships, according to Drew Boster, director of admissions.

The day's activities begin at noon with registration followed by luncheons in faculty members' homes. Students will write an essay in the afternoon on a topic selected by the Regents Committee and be interviewed by a committee of two faculty members, one Wartburg student and one member at large.

A dinner banquet in the Student Union will complete the day's activities. President William Jellema will be the featured speaker.

Award money will be divided into 75 scholarships, with four $2,000 awards, six $1,000 awards, 20 $650 awards and 45 $300 awards. Recipients will be announced by Feb. 27.

To be eligible for a Regents Scholarship, students must be high school seniors ranking in the top five percent of their graduating class, or having an ACT composite score of 29 or higher and ranking in the top 10 percent.

Twelve students who are unable to attend Saturday's session will follow the same process on Sunday.

According to Boster, admissions is looking for high freshman enrollment next Fall Term, but "we're also looking for quality students, and I think we're going to get them."

Wartburg students don't welch on loans

While the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare is in the midst of a campaign to recover $430 million from about 390,000 persons who are in default on government-backed student loans, Wartburg Financial Aid Officer Paul Aasen notes nearly $195 of every $200 loaned to Wartburg students through two major loan programs have been repaid.

Default on the United Student Aid Fund (USAF), which was the 1960's predecessor to the present Federally Insured Student Loan program (FISL), has been only 1.32 percent, according to Aasen. This means that $98.68 of every $100 borrowed has been repaid or is currently on schedule in a repayment plan.

The second large student loan program with a substantial history is the National (Defense) Direct Student Loan program which is funded primarily by federal appropriations with some matching money provided by the school.

"Often these loans are made to students who are considered too great a credit risk to secure a loan from private lenders," Aasen said.

"Since this is an on-going program which includes students still in school or just out of school, it is possible for comparative figures to be somewhat misleading, but using the same analysis as cited for USAF, the Wartburg default rate is only 4.4 percent," Aasen said.

Translated that means that $95.60 of every $100 loaned under the NDSL program has been repaid or is in process of being repaid.

"While HEW is having its problems with collection of defaulted loans, we think the general public may be getting a false impression of the facts as they relate to Wartburg students," Aasen said.

"We feel that our students are financially responsible people. This is probably a reflection of the sort of training they receive from their families and a general public respect for financial responsibility.

Waverly Consort here

From Waverly Place in New York City to Wartburg College in Waverly, IA.

That's the itinerary of The Waverly Consort which will be appearing on Wartburg's Artist Series stage Monday, Feb. 27.

This group of nine singers and instrumentalists, who specialize in music from the Medieval, Renaissance and Baroque periods, will be performing a program of Spanish music from the Age of Exploration at 8 p.m. in Neumann Auditorium.

Tickets are still available and may be obtained in advance by calling Wartburg's Artist Series, ext. 301.

The Waverly Consort's program is formally titled "The Year 1492," a date significant for America as well as Spain.

It was the year America entered into the mainstream of Western civilization, and it marked the beginning of Spain's imperial expansion, a step taken when Ferdinand and Isabella gave Columbus the finances to explore the New World.

That decision came about partially because of Spain's joy at the expulsion of all non-European and non-Catholic peoples from its borders and the unification of the nation under one politcal and religious allegiance.

The Waverly Consort explores, through music, the cross currents of those turbulent years in Spain's history.

In its music, Spain's early history survives in bold contrasts: the austere grandeur of Spanish cathedral songs alongside earthy Moorish-influenced Sephardic songs; lusty, robust drinking songs beside elegant, proud and occasionally morbid lyrics of courtly love; naive Nativity songs and wry, sarcastic complaints of unrequited love—all performed in period costume and on period instruments, such as the vielle, kemence, recorder, rauschpfeife, krummhorn, vihuela, oud, viol, rebec and psaltery.

The Waverly Consort had its beginnings in Gustave Reese's "Introduction of Musicology" class at New York University, where Michael Jaffee, a classical guitarist, met his future wife Kay, a keyboard player, while both were studying for their master's degree.

The two began performing on guitar and recorder and were later joined by a fellow student. As their interest in musicology grew, the trio began performing early music on reproductions of period instruments with Jaffee learning to play the lute and his wife studying the recorder.

By 1966, the trio had become six, including two singers, and taking their name from Waverly Place (which runs by New York University's Washington Square campus), made their debut at the Carnegie Recital Hall.

Since then, three more performers have joined The Waverly Consort, which has become a fully professional year-round performing organization under Jaffee's direction.

The Consort now gives an annual New York subscription series at Alice Tully Hall, the last two of which were sold out weeks in advance, and appears frequently in the Fuentiduena Apse at the Cloisters and the Medieval Tapestry Court of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

It has toured thoughout the U.S. and England and has made numerous recordings for Vanguard.

Convo slates energy talks

"Handling the High Cost of Energy" is the topic of a series of discussions to be held at Wartburg Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 21-22, in Becker Hall of Science.

Practicality in dealing with energy costs will be the focus of the two-day session, which is open to the public, according to Dr. Victor Myers of the Wartburg chemistry department and a member of the planning committee.

"We will be discussing those things which are feasible for an individual or for small groups," he said. "Those items which demand a large capital investment will not be emphasized."

Speakers include Skip Laitner of Ames, an energy consultant and citizen organizer for the Community Action Research Group, and Darryl Thayer and Karen Wilson of St. Paul, Minn., consultants to Alternative Sources of Energy, an organization which publishes a bi-monthly magazine promoting alternative technologies.

Laitner is involved in energy research and legislative action; Wilson is an educator, who conducts continuing education courses and workshops on such energy-related subjects as solar greenhousing; and Thayer, who has physics and mechanical engineering degrees, has designed solar equipment for Sheldahl, Inc.

Thayer and Wilson currently coordinate a course on Alternative Energy Resources at the University of Minnesota. They have developed a number of audiovisual presentations which will be used during the two-day event.

The schedule of Tuesday's sessions:

6 p.m., Exhibits and displays

7 p.m., "What's the Future for Energy in Iowa?" by Laitner, discussing what individuals and organizations can do to promote sound energy planning.

8 p.m., Question and answer session; exhibits and displays

8:30 p.m., "Alternative Sources of Energy" by Thayer and Wilson, focusing on the state of solar energy and obstacles involved in its use.

9:30 p.m., Exhibits and displays.

Wednesday's schedule:

8:30 a.m., "Preparing a House for Alternative Energy" by Thayer and Wilson, views insulation requirements and construction techniques.

9:40 a.m. "Collecting Solar Energy: Passive Systems" by Wilson

11:00 a.m., "Collecting Solar Energy: Active Systems" by Thayer and Laitner.

After each lecture, the speakers will be available for questioning, and displays and exhibits will be open to the public.

Exhibits include a survey of petrochemicals by the Wartburg chapter of the American Chemical Society; information about maximizing crop production per acre by Dr. Galen Eiben of the biology department and college students; solar collectors by Dr. Chris Schmidt of the physics department; and commercial collectors by Chamberlin Manufacturing Corporation of Waterloo.

News Briefs

Lamps reported missing

Several lamps were discovered missing from the East Room in the Student Union following Student Senate and SEA's Valentines Day Dance, according to Dr. Kent Hawley, vice president for student affairs.

Dr. Hawley said the Security Office and Student Affairs were investigating the thefts. Anyone with information on the thefts can contact the Student Affairs Office, Hawley said.

WPD enforcing limit

Waverly police are now enforcing the 48-hour time limit for cars parked on 9th, 10th and 11th Streets, according to Dr. Kent Hawley, vice president for student affairs. Any vehicle violating the 48-hour limit is subject to ticketing and/or towing, said Hawley.

Senate election date set

Candidates for student body president, vice president, secretary and recorder for 1978-1979 must sign up at the Senate office by Feb. 24, according to Senate President Cindy Kasper. Elections for these positions will be held Tuesday, March 21.

If more than two persons seek the presidency, two candidates will be selected in a student body convention held in Neumann Auditorium, Sunday, March 12, Kasper said.

'Mahogany' to show

"Mahogany," starring Diana Ross and Billy Dee Williams, will be shown tonight at 8 in Neumann Auditorium as part of Wartburg's film series. Admission is $1 or presentation of a season ticket.

Course to discuss sex

"Sexuality and Contraception" will be the theme for the Preparing for Marriage course Tuesday, Feb. 21, from 7 to 8 p.m. in Centennial Lounge.

Led by Planned Parenthood from Waterloo, this session will discuss contraception problems and methods. A film on the birth of a child will be shown.

Will brainstorm Berufung

A Berufung brainstorming session will be held Thursday, Feb. 23, at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union.

According to Maxine Churchin, director of the Career Development Center, the purpose of the session will be to assess the present Berufung program and where it can go in the future.

Churchin wants to hear from those who are "for, against, indifferent to or have mixed opinions of Berufung."

Most of the time will be spent in small discussion groups that will include students, faculty and staff members.

Services, study set

Intern Pastor Bob Fullerton will lead a Lenten breakfast Bible study Sunday, Feb. 19, in the Den at 9 a.m. He will focus on Paul's Letter to the Galatians.

At 10:30 a.m. in Neumann Auditorium, Pastor Larry Trachte will lead a service using traditional Lutheran liturgy. His sermon is entitled "Saddle Your Camel, Sarai."

Kramer to help solve social ills

Three sessions dealing with educational philosophy and residential life staff development are planned for Wednesday, Feb. 22, according to Edie Madsen, assistant to the vice president for student affairs.

Special resource person for the day will be Mary Kramer, program coordinator at the University of Nebraska. Kramer is primarily involved in social and emotional education, said Madsen.

Kramer will head two sessions Wednesday morning in the Student Union Conference Room. The first, from 8 to 10, will be an introduction to noted authors who have viewed education from a philosophical stance. This includes social-emotional development of people as well as intellectual.

A session for the student affairs staff will be held from 11 a.m. to noon, discussing the application of these theories to the work of the residential life staff.

The final session of the day, also in the Conference Room, will be from 1:30 to 3 p.m. and will deal with application of educational philosophy to residential hall life and student interaction.

Madsen said the day is primarily organized for the student affairs staff and residential life and house government staffs.

Does game room face certain death?

The game room is closing. This isn't the first time that's happened, so students probably won't give much attention to this bit of information.

Only this time it's closing for good.

That's no rumor. It's a statement from Student Union Director Buzz Levick, and this time it is for keeps. Due to vandalism, difficulty in obtaining good game room equipment, and mainly because the game room is a "losing proposition," according to Levick, Wartburg's fun center is now a thing of the past.

At least that's the way things stand right now. A meeting between Social Activities Director Ken Berryhill, Vice President for Student Affairs Kent Hawley and Levick, among others, was held Wednesday morning and the decision was made to keep the game room closed until it can be decided what function the room could best serve.

By "useful function," the decision-makers determined that the game room might better serve as a place for some students to eat their lunch, if they don't like the surroundings of the caf. Or perhaps the room could be turned into a meeting place for various groups and/or organizations. Who knows?

Who cares?

If students do, they may have one more chance to save the game room, if they want it to stay. A Senate meeting is going to be held later this month or in March to determine exactly what should be done with the game room. The odds that it will stay a game room are either slim or non-existent.

What would it take to keep a game room here at Wartburg? Quite a bit, probably. If we were Luther College and could put in a bowling alley, students would probably patronize the place. As it stands, students will have to fight awfully hard to get just a couple of pin ball machines, a ping pong table and a foos ball table down there, and then they would have to take care of the equipment.

If student senators, Levick and all the rest get a great deal of feedback and some good ideas on how to make the game room work, maybe, just maybe, it would remain a game room. If not, forget the whole thing and play pin ball at Joe's.

Senate doesn't get favorable vote

By NORM SINGLETON

You get older and your mind begins to slip.

Well, something slipped my mind last issue when I printed my list of good guys. I forgot my favorite bunch, the Student Senate.

The Senate has often been the target of snide comments from this corner, but when I view the many accomplishments of this year's body, well, it evokes strong emotion in my heart.

Call it disgust.

In truth, the Senate is a collection of extremely hard-working characters. Some of them are so weary from working for a better Wartburg community that they are forced to nap during the actual Senate meetings. I've noticed their deepest sleep occurs when a call for volunteers goes out. Others are so industrious that they can't spare time for the meetings, preferring, no doubt, to serve the student body straight through it.

But yet the Senate continues to perform in fine style. Should one be in doubt of their effectivity, he need only ask the nearest senator to be assured that his representatives are doing a splendid job.

One might then ask "a splendid job of what?"

Anyway, the Senate feels its performance has been great, so good that they voted that the students buy them a dinner in the Castle Room, which the students did without even being asked, which was damn nice of the students, I thought. The Trumpet reported on this gala fete, which gave the Senate no pause because, as one senator quoth, "No one reads the Trumpet anyway."

I didn't know that. I'm upset.

Heartened by the success of that dinner, the Senate next planned a dance for the Wartburg "elite," which was held last Tuesday night, when, incidentally, certain groups were busied with previously-scheduled activities. It says something about the class of this group to observe that this dance was held in the late night place to be, Buhr Lounge, that the band was a high-priced one, that the dance was formal(!) and that other groups were implicitly encouraged to stay away.

That's my kind of bash.

Well, what has the Senate done that they should reap such rewards? Among other things they have cut the yearly Homecoming allotment in half, a move which affects nearly every student. They have served ice cream to interested students. They have "misspoken themselves" in the official Senate minutes. They have amended constitutions, held many meetings, followed parliamentary procedure and formed committees. And they have talked at great length about what in the hell they should be doing, and engaged in paranoid discussions about what people think of them, a valid worry in this case.

I wouldn't ordinarily mind, but the 1977-78 Senate held great promise and have failed to live up to it, being too busy living it up. This is indeed grim.

Well, I'm a member of the Student Senate, which means I'm guilty by association. I'm not proud of it, but I do have a suggestion.

In the elections for next year's student body officers, try not to vote for somebody that is there for another line on their placement resume.

And if it comes to it, run your self.

Credit buying like use of narcotics?

(The following is the second in a series of three articles on credit for young consumers. The article was written by Carol Pine for the National Car Rental System.)

Not surprisingly, there are two divergent schools of thought on young consumer credit: On the one hand, says a New York banker, letting young people buy "on the cuff" is "like teaching the young to use narcotics."

Meanwhile, says Irvin Penner, president of the College Credit Card Corp. (an organization that markets a variety of credit opportunities nationwide), young people are the building blocks of the future. College students, in particular, are the elite of the entire youth market, says Penner. Penner's firm is a "go-between." He links college consumers with a variety of credit interests, including Penney's, Ward's Sears, Mobile Oil and many banks across the country offering Visa (formerly BankAmericard) and Master Charge cards. Penner's firm handles phone and mail solicitations for these clients.

"The college market, to us, is the credit card market," says Penner. "Sure, there are skeptics in this field who point to defaults on student loans, but that's a different kind of credit. We have found that the college market is a right, responsible market. We don't have any sophisticated Harvard Business Review studies to prove it, but we know from experience."

Penner says his firm did conduct some surveys of the college market a few years ago and discovered, in his words, "University juniors, seniors and graduate students are indeed the real thoroughbreds of the youth market because they go through the rigors of qualifying. Competing in the academic world enhances those qualities that make them winners in life's race and concurrently make them the most desirable of consumers . . . This research took eight months, but it gave us sufficient evidence to woo upperclassmen as customers and to take the further step of recommending to our clients that they could modify the requirements and procedures of extending a credit card to this special group."

This champion of a young consumer credit is not alone. National Car Rental, a subsidiary of Household Finance Corp., launched a major advertising effort to attract young executive renters this year. The basic ad appeals to common frustrations that young renters apparently encounter: "Face it," the ad implores, "when it comes to renting a car at most places, you've got problems before you even start. Car insurance companies don't exactly stand in line to get your business. You attract more than your share of attention from the highway patrol. And you're hardly high on the corporate ladder, so you don't make a lot of money. All of which could make you a credit risk. So what does this mean when you want a car?" the ad asks, hopefully. "Do you borrow Uncle Louie's? Take a bus? Sometimes. But when you really need to rent a car, we'd like to have you ask us." The sympathetic approach to young renters seems to be winning National friends. Now, 11 percent of all credit applications approved by National Car involve people under age 25, a significant increase over years past.

One Arizona banker, who has awarded thousands of Master Charge credit cards to young people 18 and up for many years, says, "A large majority of the long-haired, bearded, unwashed generation of the Sixties have proved quite reliable–more reliable, in fact, than their parents."

With mixed feelings among credit specialists, however, it's not surprising that young adults face varied challenges when they seek credit. Securing a $100-limit junior charge card at the local department store is one thing. Getting a large auto loan, home loan or renting a $7,000 car for the week may be quite another. If a young person has not established some modest credit history, the credit horizon can be a wasteland.

"Catch 22 operates in many credit situations," says Ronald McCauley of the FTC. "You generally can't get credit until you prove you don't really need it." A slight exaggeration, perhaps, but not that far from the truth. Most young people are hampered, says McCauley, because they have unbecoming credit histories (in a situation such as this, it appears, no history is better than a sketchy history).

"Young adults are mobile," says McCauley. "They change jobs and homes frequently. They're not fully settled. A credit grantor takes permanence into account . . . and no law can stop him from doing that."

"In many cases," adds Mary Alice Minney, assistant secretary-treasurer and director of education for the International Consumer Credit Association based in St. Louis, Mo., "young people are familiar with credit practices because they used their parent's cards. But they have no established credit histories."

"Much of our attention is focused on the young," Bryant says, "because students are tomorrow's major consumers." One booklet called "It's Your Credit, Manage it Wisely" is distributed widely to high schools and colleges. It deals with the advantages and disadvantages of credit, confusion about credit, how to establish credit, how to shop for credit, how to interpret credit agreements, and how to handle financial difficulties.

Rabbi lectures next week

Rabbi Jay Goldberg will speak on Judaism in Buhr Lounge and in four religion classes on Thursday and Friday, Feb. 23 and 24, according to the Rev. Larry Trachte, campus pastor.

"Judaism and the Healing Process" is the topic of Goldberg's talk in Buhr Lounge, Feb. 23, at 8 p.m.

Goldberg will discuss some of the essentials of the Jewish faith in Dr. Herman Diers' "Beliefs and Values" class Thursday at 10 a.m. in Wartburg Hall Lounge.

In the Rev. Waldemar Gies' "Oriental Thought" class at 11 a.m. in room 100, Old Main, Rabbi Goldberg will contrast Judaism, Islam, and Christianity.

In Dr. Marshall Johnson's "New Testament Thought" class at 1 p.m. in room 201, Luther Hall, Rabbi Goldberg will discuss the Jewish understanding of Jesus.

Rabbi Goldberg will lecture about his book "Living Will" in the Rev. Trachte's "Facing Death" class, Friday, Feb. 24, at 9 a.m. in room 308, Luther Hall.

All sessions are open to visitors, including classes.

Rabbi Goldberg received his B.A. from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. After serving in the Marine Corps he entered the Hebrew Union College Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati where he was ordained in 1963. He received both his Bachelor and Masters degrees in Hebrew Letters while at the seminary.

Rabbi Goldberg has served at Temple Israel in Minneapolis, Temple Emanuel in Montreal and Temple B'nai Jeshurun in Des Moines.

This Week's Recitals

Diercks in senior recital

Baritone Gregory Diercks will be presented in a senior recital by Wartburg's music department tomorrow.

His recital will be at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of the Liemohn Hall of Music. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Diercks will be accompanied by Aaron Swestka and assisted by soprano Karlene Kischer, pianist Mary Niehaus and reader Jane Allen.

Diercks's program includes "Vier Ernste Gesange" by Brahms and "Sechs Lieder von Gellert" by Beethoven.

Kischer will sing "Hermit Songs" by Barber, "Susanna" by Floyd and "La Forza Del Destino" by Verdi.

Facuity recital Sunday

The band director of West Central High School in Maynard, who also teaches part-time at Wartburg, will be presented in a faculty recital at Wartburg Sunday, Feb. 19.

Richard Scheffel, who plays the tuba, will perform at 1:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Liemohn Hall of Music. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Scheffel will be assisted by pianist April Kaskey, tubists Steve Kruger, junior, John Sauer, senior, and Dave Sloan, sophomore, and the Wartburg Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Harold Sundet of Wartburg's music faculty.

Hall phones destroyed by weekend vandals

Ten residence hall telephones were either partially or totally destroyed the weekend of Feb. 3-4, according to Edie Madsen, assistant to the vice president for student affairs.

One phone in Grossmann, one in Vollmer and eight telephones in Clinton Hall were damaged.

Madsen said most of the repairs have already been made, even though persons responsible for the damage have not been apprehended.

"We're relying on the residents for information," Madsen said. Student Affairs and security are investigating the incident, but have no leads.

An initial estimate on repair costs was $300.

Madsen said the vandalism appears to be an isolated incident, as the college has experienced very little malicious damage this year.

Old, run down and too small maybe, but Wartburg's own Old Main has just been declared a national landmark.

Old Main becomes historic landmark

Old Main has been entered in the National Register of Historic Places, according to Adrian D. Anderson, director of the Division of Historic Preservation in Iowa City.

Old Main, built in 1880, is the oldest building on Wartburg's campus. It was originally Wartburg Teachers' Seminary, which was founded in 1878 to train young men to teach in German Lutheran parish schools.

The National Register recognizes structures and sites which are significant in history, architecture and archeology. Properties listed in the Register are eligible for federal matching acquisition or restoration funds, and are protected from any federally assisted or licensed projects that may threaten them.

President William Jellema nominated Old Main to the Register.

Norse douse own statue

Luther College's statue of Martin Luther got a douse of orange paint Saturday, Feb. 11, the night of the Wartburg-Luther basketball game, but it appears the job was done by Luther students.

Wartburg Vice President for Student Affairs Dr. Kent Hawley says he was contacted by his counterpart at Luther, Dean Orlin Mandsager, who believes Luther students were responsible for the act.

Dr. Hawley speculated that the tradition of painting the statue was done by Luther students to psych the school up for their encounter with the Knights.

He said he didn't think the act was done by Wartburg students, and added, "I'm convinced the Wartburg Five didn't have any part in it."

The Wartburg Five, senior Norm Singleton, juniors Dave Wilken, Kirt Ferden and Randy Iverson and sophomore Bob Siefkes, pled guilty to charges of Illegal Use of Fireworks earlier this year following an unsuccessful attempt at burning a "W" on Luther's football field.

Regardless of who painted Martin Luther, it apparently had little effect on the Norse basketball squad. The Knights won handily, 104-66.

Valentine's dance well attended

By CINDY WEBER

Will Wartburg students go to a formal dance? That question has been the topic of debate since the Student Education Association (SEA) and the Student Senate decided to sponsor a formal dance on Valentine's Day.

The answer? There were plenty of Wartburg students glad for a chance to do something out of the ordinary.

"I thought it was a good idea," said sophomore Dave Halbach. "I like to go up to Joe's and stuff, but it's nice to have something different to do once in a while."

The fact that the dance was well attended was important to most people; many said that this kept them from feeling foolish about getting dressed up to go to Buhr Lounge.

The only complaint about the dance seemed to be about the band.

According to senior Craig Bova, the band was good, but "they took too many breaks."

Senior Marlene Coffey, SEA president, said there were only 40 people attending the dinner in the Castle Room which preceeded the dance, but added, "That's not too bad for our first time."

Student Senate President Cindy Kasper attributed the excellent attendance to the fact that dress code for the dance was not strictly formal (tuxedos and long dresses were not required) and that the prices were low.

"It helped that the cost for the Castle Room dinner was low and we didn't charge for the dance," she commented.

Knights claim mat crown

By KEVIN KLATT

There were no upsets at the Iowa Conference wrestling meet yesterday in Indianola. The Wartburg College matmen rolled up 91¼ points to comfortably outdistance second-place Upper Iowa, which nailed down 63½ points.

The Knights claimed five individual champions, including seniors Steve Deike at 134 pounds, Pat Burke at 142 pounds, Glen. Colton at 158 pounds, Ron Ott at 167 pounds and Mike Broghammer at 190 pounds.

Sophomore Casey Robb, who won the conference title at 126 pounds one year ago, finished second in that weight division.

Wrestlers taking third place points for the Knights included sophomore Dave Schlueter at 118 pounds and seniors Carl Cheeseman at 177 pounds and Tom Whalen at heavyweight.

This year's Iowa Conference crown is another in a long list of accomplishments for the Knight matmen. It is the third consecutive conference title for Wartburg and the fourth in the last five years. In addition, the Knights are still adding to their 44 consecutive wins in dual meet competition.

Besides winning the individual championship at his weight division, Deike was voted co-Most Valuable Wrestler for the tournament. He shared that honor with Luther's Don Di Laura.

Rounding out the scoring for the tournament, behind Wartburg and Upper Iowa were Central with 52 points, Luther with 49, William Penn with 19½, Simpson with 18½, and Dubuque with 13½. Buena Vista did not compete in the tournament.

A Lot About Nothing

Fairy tales come true

By BRAD ZELINSKY

I believe it, Leon Spinks is now the heavyweight champion of the boxing world. That doesn't mean he will be after his next fight.

At 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday night, I was sitting at my desk wishing I didn't have to work. I sat staring at the little sign in front of me. While looking at the zero on it, it hit me. Leon is going to do it. He's going to out-punch the legandary Ali.

When 6:55 rolled around, I ventured to the dorm lounge to join the throng of underdog yellers, who had come to watch Ali deck Spinks.

After cheering for the underdog in three matches between no-names, the fun began and I silently waited while listening to the boxing experts around me. They were informing Spinks on how to box. The first eight rounds went as expected, Ali was dancing and talking and fooling around.

At 8:30, or approximately thereabouts, I began to giggle. Leon was never supposed to last this long, but there he was, still standing by himself. I could feel it again, I don't know why, but I'd almost given up on Leon, and here he was jabbing Ali. Of course, he was getting jabbed too.

I nearly broke out in laughter when several of the surrounding coaches started to cease their boxing suggestions.

The great moment occurred in the fifteenth and final round, when everyone said the time had come for the knockout. Boy, was there a hush among the masses when Spinks came out and raised the roof by throwing everything he had left into putting away a championship title.

He succeeded.

At 9:28 p.m., Leon Spinks defeated World Champion Muhammed Ali and became the underdog's dream come true.

This also was a victory for me. It was the first time that I truly believed the other guy had a chance and could see it through.

I know you believe, as do I, that the Spinks reign will be one of the shortest in boxing history, but who cares?

And by the way, my dear editor, speculating on the underdog can even be profitable.

Cagers win three games in four days, host Upper Iowa, Woolfolk tomorrow

By JEFF NIHART

After three road games in four nights, and three triumphs in as many times, Wartburg's basketball team returns home tomorrow evening to host Upper Iowa in a 7:30 game in Knights Gymnasium, following the 5:30 junior varsity contest.

The Knights, 9-2 in Iowa Conference action, are in the midst of a six-game winning streak, but still trail league-leading Central, which sports a 10-1 mark.

Upper Iowa, after a quick start, has lost five conference games in a row, dropping their loop record to 4-6.

Wartburg defeated the Peacocks in Fayette earlier, 83-75, but Coach Buzz Levick warns, "Upper Iowa is capable of playing with any team in the conference. If you catch them on a night when all five of their ballplayers are playing well, they are tough to beat."

Upper Iowa is led by 6'7" junior center Keith Woolfolk, who leads the league in both scoring and rebounding.

In the teams' first meeting, Woolfolk took scoring honors in the game with 33 points.

Levick praises the big center saying, "We've said everything that can be said about Woolfolk."

Levick expects a lot of student body interest in the game.

"It will be a big game because of the distance between of the two schools. Each side will have a lot of student body interest."

The last time Wartburg was at home, two weeks ago against Simpson and Buena Vista, they posted 87-76 and 92-74 wins.

In Decorah last Saturday, Luther tried to stop the Knight Express. But in what Levick called "an exceptionally-fine performance," Wartburg routed the Norsemen 104-66.

The Knights shot 64 percent from the field and had 19 more rebounds than Luther. Kirk Kinnear poured in 25 points to pace Wartburg, Steve Burnham hit for 23 and Mark Fry fired in 16.

Monday night against Dubuque, the Knights continued to roll with a 73-64 victory. Despite what some may consider a narrow margin of victory, the Wartburg boss commented, "Dubuque is a tough place to play. We played pretty well." The Knights shot well again, hitting 56 percent from the field. Fry rammed in 30 points to lead all scorers, while Kinnear and Burnham added 17 each.

Upper Iowa	4	6	74.2	72.5
Dubuque	3	7	64.8	72.9
Simpson	1	9	70.0	79.4

In a non-conference affair at Grinnell Tuesday evening, the Knights outclassed the Pioneers 100-76. A rebounding advantage of 69-43, plus some more excellent shooting from the field (52 percent) helped the Knights to their 17th win.

Women cagers host three in district play

Wartburg is hosting one of four small college women's basketball district tournaments being held across the state today and tomorrow.

Four teams are entered in the Wartburg district including Dubuque, Luther, Upper Iowa and Wartburg. Loras was assigned to the Wartburg district but has withdrawn.

Two teams will advance out of the double elimination tournament to the state championships in Des Moines, Feb. 23-25.

District Schedule

Today:
4 p.m. First round consolations
6 p.m. District championship
Tomorrow:
10 a.m. Consolation final
All games in Knights Gym.

In Friday's first round games, Luther met Dubuque and Upper Iowa played Wartburg.

The first round losers play in a consolation game this afternoon at 4 p.m. in Knights Gym, while the winners square off at 6 p.m. in a contest which decides the district championship and one of the state tournament berths.

The loser of the championship game must return tomorrow to play the winner of the consolation game at 10 a.m. for second place and the other state tourney slot.

Wartburg won the district title last year and went on to finish third in the state with Upper Iowa the district runnerup and fifth in the state.

Wartburg Coach Cheryl Wren said that Luther, 14-7, should make a strong bid for the district crown along with Upper Iowa and Wartburg.

Wartburg, 13-4, had beaten Upper Iowa the last 12 times the teams have met, and the Peacocks, 8-10, were seeking to halt that four-year skid when the two teams met in the first round.

In addition to the Knights' leading scorer, senior Cheryl Pueggel, who is averaging 17 points a game, Wren will be relying on senior Kathy Heiar and sophomore Kathy Laufer for scoring punch in the tourney.

Heiar and Laufer have been averaging 20 and 22 points respectively during Wartburg's last three games.

Women gain wins, not recognition

Wartburg's women's basketball team may not get the same attention as the Knights' undefeated wrestlers or title-contending men's basketball team, but you couldn't convince Coach Cheryl Wren that her squad isn't deserving of some recognition.

Her Knights boast a 13-4 regular season record and have their sights set on improving last year's third place finish in the upcoming small college women's state tournament.

Led by senior Cheryl Pueggel, a 5'11½" center who is averaging 17 points a game, the Wartburg women carried a five-game winning streak into this weekend's district action.

Pueggel is the owner of most Wartburg scoring records and reached the 1,000 point plateau earlier this season. She has led the team in scoring the past three years and last season was the Knights' top rebounder.

Despite a slow start this year, Pueggel again leads the team in both categories.

"She's back on top of things again," said Wren after Pueggel's 30-point performance in the Knights' recent 81-60 win over Waldorf.

Pueggel says part of her team's success can be attributed to the fact that she and guards Sheri Ferguson and Kathy Heiar have been starting since they were freshmen.

"We've all worked together for four years," Pueggel said, "so we know where we are on the court."

It was the 5'3" Heiar who nonchalantly canned a 22-foot jump shot with two seconds left to let the Knights edge the University of Northern Iowa for the second time this year, 60-58.

Ferguson, meanwhile, is an 85 percent free throw shooter whose quickness provides four or five steals per game in the back court.

The Knights, 51-25 over the last four seasons, met Upper Iowa in the first round of district play in Knights Gymnasium earlier today.

Wartburg holds a 12-0 series lead over Upper Iowa, including a 64-56 victory Feb. 10 in Waverly, but the Knights are not likely to be taking any of their opponents lightly in tournament play.

"I know we can be beat," admits Pueggel. "We're not a 'super team.'"

But Pueggel also says she thinks the Knights can beat any team in the state, providing they play up to their potential.

Her coach, who is in her second year at Wartburg, agrees with that observation.

"Sometimes I don't think we realize how good we are," she said.

Wartburg's chance to find out how good they really are began when the Knights and 28 other Iowa small college women's basketball teams opened district play in search of a shot at the state title today.

Mandsager gets All American honor

Linebacker Neil Mandsager, a Wartburg senior from Marshalltown, has been named to the 1978 College Division Academic All-American Football Team.

He was put on the first team defensive unit by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA), who have been selecting the team for the past 26 years.

The 6-3, 190-pound senior, who is a pre-medical student, was a middle linebacker for the Knights, who finished 7-2 overall and second in the Iowa Conference with a 6-1 mark.

A two-year starter, he was put on the First All Iowa Conference Team this fall by the IIAC coaches, was voted the Most Valuable Player on the squad by his teammates, led Wartburg in tackles during conference play with 38 plus 24 assists, had two interceptions and two quarterback sacks and served as co-captain during the 1977 season. He shared the Koob-Lynes Award with running back Glen Colton which goes to top Wartburg student-athletes in football and basketball.

Mandsager also serves as president of Wartburg's chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and is a member of Beta Beta Beta, national honorary biology society, and Alpha Chi, national honorary academic society.

The academic All-American team is sponsored by the American Broadcasting Company (ABC), and the balloting was handled by the sports information office at the University of Illinois.

To be nominated, a student-athlete had to be a regular performer on his football squad and possess a grade point average of 3.0 or better. A nominee also was required to have achieved at least sophomore status.

Two teams were selected, and the combined grade point average of the players was 3.67.

Four lead IMs

Only four teams remain unbeaten in men's intramural basketball with playoffs rapidly approaching. Clinton III North, the faculty team, Clinton I North and Clinton I South lead their divisions with unblemished records at 4-0.

III North leads the 'A' division of the American League, while the faculty tops the 'B' division. National League leaders are I North in the 'A' division and I South in the 'B' division.

Playoffs begin Thursday, Feb. 23, with the ties within the leagues being broken. Any team tied will play to decide the division leader. The American 'A' winner will play the winner of the 'B' division at 7:30 p.m., while the 'A' and 'B' division leaders of the National League will confront each other Monday, Feb. 27, at 8:30 p.m. The victors of those games go on to play in the championship game Tuesday, Feb. 28, at 7:30 p.m.

Floor sets pool depth record

By GREG WICKHAM

The men of Clinton Ground South have done it again. The floor that gave you the National Guinea Pig Association and the Chuck Barris Fan Club have broken their own record for swimming pool depth.

The idea of a pool dated back to last year. The original plan is credited to the Ground South Design for Tomorrow Committee. The pool was constructed inside the CGS shower room. A door (usually a freshman is quick to volunteer one) is placed on its side, supported with beams in front of the entrance. Next step is to add water, a couple boxes of Mr. Bubble and you have instant excitement on Wartburg's campus.

According to sophomore Dave Rod, last week's pool depth of four feet tops the old record of a pool built last year by six inches. That pool broke and flooded the hall and surrounding rooms. Senior Les Shelley explained that they had taken measures to prevent another flood. "This year we were ready for that problem with freshmen stationed to watch for leaks," Shelley said.

Floor members agreed the pool was one of the highlights of the year. Junior Terry Soli who transferred to Wartburg this term, called the pool his most exciting moment here so far.

Freshman Dave Rueber claims he may buy a sunlamp and spend Easter break swimming in the shower room. Ruber is the leader of the freshmen flood control team as well as donator of a door for the cause. "It's kind of like going to some place like Florida only without the expense."

Most everyone on the floor had positive thoughts about the project. "A good time was had by all," is how sophomore Gary Anderson summed up the evening. "As far as I'm concerned it was a real team effort," according to senior Butch Hilton.

As well as floor members taking advantage of the pool, several girls took a well-deserved bath. In fact they were so overcome by the thought of going for a swim in the dead of winter, they forgot to remove their clothes. There was fear of a tidal wave when one female was thrown in.

But the evening was not yet complete. Soon after draining the swimming pool, it was time for the CGS seal races. Senior Doug Courtney, who had just returned from a night class, was quick to participate in this activity. The contest ended in a three-way tie between Courtney and sophomores Rowly Burton and Matt McClure.

Presently, the CGS Design for Tomorrow Swimming Pool has been drained. Many believe the next project may be to install a beach alongside the pool. As one floor member put it, after this pool and the excitement of the seal races, nothing would surprise me.

Burton had some thoughts on the evening's events: "Some people say they don't know anything about Ground South, but by the end of this term they'll know us."

After seeing this pool, the sky may be the limit for CGS and their Design for Tomorrow Committee.

In the fog of a Ground South "sauna," a new record is set. The pool shown here was measured at four feet in depth, breaking the old record of three and a half feet set one year ago. Immediately after setting the pool depth record, the C.G.S. residents participated in the seal races. Florida it's not, but who can beat it for fun? Photo by Bob Burke

Luther run— tiring but fun

By NORM SINGLETON

There are a million ways of displaying school spirit. You can be a cheerleader, dress in orange and black all the time or be an athlete.

But every year along about this time, the good ol' boys exhibit theirs. And they do it with style, by running the ball to Luther, a feat requiring stamina, zeal and a zinc-lined stomach. The hardy group covers the 70-odd miles to Decorah with each member running quarter-mile legs each time his number comes up.

This year's run was a classic, particularly when compared to the debacle of 1977 when only nine men showed for the run.

Some of them are still alive to tell about it.

But with six veterans of last year's journey returning, adequate precautions were taken. The battle-scarred sextet of seniors Scott Radechel and Gary McNeal, juniors Dave Wilken and Brian Foster, sophomore Dave Halbach and myself recruited nineteen guys, alerted the proper authorities and packed an adequate amount of supplies.

In short, we made for a good time.

It was. Saturday's weather was pleasant, if not balmy, which helped the runs seem mercifully short. With the number of personnel we had, each man could relax between runs and consume a can of his favorite beverage and perhaps a puffarillo.

Wilken and Halbach, tiring of such simple pleasures, attempted suicide between Tripoli and Sumner, but this was atypical behavior. They survived.

The team even sported celebrity runners. The alumni were represented by Jeff Werling (BA'77) and guest runner Michael "Jackson" Brown of the University of Iowa.

With this sprightly team, the trip took about 10 hours and 20 minutes. Each man ran about 3.92 miles for an average speed of 7.98 miles per hour. As usual there was no cheering throng outside Luther Fieldhouse to herald our arrival.

Astute observers undoubtedly noted that the entrance of the runners rivaled last year's in the area of staggering. Last year that was due to the effects of exhaustion.

This year it was the effects of having fun.
